SAWYER ENTERS GOVERNOR RACE

Parole Jury Hears Ex-Chaplain as Quiz Opens

REV. SITTLER WIFE, FIRST TO BE QUESTIONED

Patrolman Copper Named As Special Investigator For Parole Jury.

HURLEY LISTS 10 OTHERS

Former Chaplain Left O.S.R. 8 Years Ago Because Of Differences.

The special grand jury seeking evidence of parole irregularities heard its first two witnesses at the Mansfield reformatory today.

They were Rev. Louis A. Sittler, former chaplain at the reformatory, and Mrs. Sittler.

First to testify was Mrs. Sittler. She was in the grand jury room for about 30 minutes. She was followed by her husband, who was chaplain at the reformatory from 1924 until Aug. 1, 1930. He resigned then, at the request of Thomas C. Jenkins, former superintendent, and issued a statement in which he said he differed with the administration of the institution on numerous matters and with those officials who had parole authority.

Before Jury 2 Hours

Rev. Sittler was in the grand jury room for more than two hours, and had just completed his testimony when the grand jury recessed at 12.15 p. m. Neither he nor Hurley would comment on what his testimony concerned.

Asked about the differences between himself and institution authorities at the time he resigned, Rev. Sittler said he had contended that the method of presenting inmates for parole was inadequate, and that inmates had objected to it on those grounds. He said he did not feel that inmates had been required to meet strick enough requirements to become eligible for paroles.

He said he had asked for a state investigation into that matter at the time, but said his request was never acted on.

As the jury recessed, Hurley announced that it would reconvene at 1.45 p. m., and would hear testimony of a number of inmates. He would not disclose

Chinese Put Jap Armies On Defensive

Counter-Thrusts on Two Fronts Cause Flight of Japanese Troops.

SHANGHAI — (AP) — Chinese counter-thrusts put Japanese armies on the defensive today in two important zones of their Tientsin-Pukow railway north of Nanking and in the Hangchow area, 125 miles southwest of Shanghai. Japanese sources admitted they had been forced into defense positions in those areas.

Strong Chinese units approximately 30 miles north of Nanking were attempting to cut the Japanese column which had advanced from the conquered Chinese capital as part of a two-way threat against Suchow.

Previous Chinese counter-attacks had slowed Japanese advancing down the Tientsin-Pukow railway from Tsiinan, Shantung province capital.

China Claims Tsinan.

Chinese told of additional successes in South Shantung today. They asserted that Tsining, 120 miles south of Tsinan, was "entirely in our hands and added that "a decisive battle is imminent."

The Japanese spokesman asserted, howevevr, that Japanese forces had retained possession of Tsining and that the Suchow-advancing south along the Tientsin-Pukow railway had gained ground in a new offensive.

Heavy fighting was in progress in Hangchow area, where Japanese apparently had been balked in their attempt to drive inland from the seaport.

Japanese said they had no information on the reported capture of Chwansha, across the Whangpoo river from Shanghai, by Chinese troops, but conceded that "it is possible."

Meanwhile thousands of Yunnan troops from China's southern interior massed in Nanchang for a defense against any Japanese land attack against Hangkow, Yangtze river port 150 miles to the northwest.

Council to Study U.S. Economic Problems Proposed by Bulkley

WASHINGTON— (AP)—Senator Bulkley (D.-Ohio) proposed today that the nation's "most intelligent and forward-looking elements" pool their experience in a national council on economic problems

Bulkley said the senate manufacturer's committee, which he heads, and about 100 private citizens had studied the idea for months.

"Whatever our decision may be as to temporary, immediate remedies for the present recession," he said, "this more long time, permanent approach which we have been working on should be differentiated from plans or proposals which so prolifically spring up under the spur of immediate pressure."

He said the formal call for organizing the council would go out in the near future.

The council would draw its members from business, labor, agriculture, physical and social sciences, and such professional groups as lawyers, engineers, historians and economists. Their advice would be available to congress and the president at all times.

President Roosevelt meanwhile continued his business conferences, arranging to talk over auto financing Friday with both manufacturers and auto finance men.

This meeting will follow a conference tomorrow with the commerce department's business advisory council

Figures from the automobile manufacturers' association showed that in 1934 only 37 per cent of new auto installment buying called for payments over a period of more than a year. In 1935, the percentage increased to 62, and in 1936 to 71.8.

SPEED ROSS KIDNAP-KILLER TO CHICAGO

Confessed Suspect Admits He Murdered Confederate After Getting $50,000 Ransom.

$14,000 IN NOTES FOUND

Urge To 'Play Ponies' Leads To Arrest At Santa Anita Race Track By G-Men.

LOS ANGELES—(AP)—Relentless department of justice agents, at the end of a four-month manhunt, marked the kidnap-slaying of Charles S. Ross of Chicago "solved" today as they secretly whisked a man they said was the confessed killer back to Chicago to stand trial.

J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, announced Peter Anders, 30, former logger, admitted he slew Ross two days after $50,000 ransom was paid near Rockford, Ill., Oct. 8, 1937, and then shot and killed his confederate, James Atwood Gray.

Traced by Ransom.

Anders was traced across the country by a trail of ransom bills he spent lavishly at race tracks, Hoover said.

Agents recovered $14,403.25 of the ransom on Anders and at his hotel, Hoover said.

The bodies of Ross and Gray have not been recovered, Hoover said, adding:

"We are certain the bodies are not in the state of Illinois, where the actual murders took place. This fact gave the federal government jurisdiction in the case."

It was Anders' irrepressible urge to "play the ponies" that led to his capture. He was passing some of the ransom money through the pari-mutuel windows at Santa Anita, Hoover said, when he was seized.

Officials of Santa Anita and banks here were credited by Hoover with final help in springing the trap.

Anders was said to have at least three aliases: Albert March, Marshall Eaton and Ray Crantz. Hoover said he also confessed to participating in the robbery of about 20 banks.

Worked In Log Camp.

About 30 years old, five feet eight inches in height, the slender, wiry prisoner once worked as a logger near Spokane, Hoover said.

House, Senate Conferees Agree On $4,000,000 For Relief.

COLUMBUS—(AP)—Final enactment of the $4,000,000 tax revenue relief bill was anticipated today as house members of the joint senate and house conference indicated their readiness to accept virtually all senate amendments to the measure.

Rep. Lody Huml, (D-Cleveland) sponsor of the bill and chairman of the house conferees, said the only probable change in the measure would be a clarification of the utility excise tax provision. He anticipated the 65 per cent tax on the gross receipts of utilities would stand as would the one-fourth cent beverage tax.

The house had passed the bill with a one per cent utility excise tax and a one-half cent beverage tax

SCHOOLS GIVEN $53,000 CASH

Funds To Retire Notes Of City, County Systems Sent Out By State.

Mansfield and Richland county schools today were allocated a total of $53,001 by the state department of education to retire school foundation notes authorized early in December.

Mansfield schools received $23,546, or approximately half the amount due in outstanding notes, while the county's rural schools got $29,455.

State department officials said funds for retiring the remaining notes would be distributed as soon as more money is credited to the school foundation fund.

While Boyd Robinson, county superintendent, said complete figures regarding the total debts owed by county schools were not immediately available, it was believed that a number of the schools have no debts and will be permitted to add the state money to their general funds.

Other schools in this section received the following amounts:

Shelby, $6,467; Crestline, $3,627; Willard, $5,326; Ashland City, $9,343, Bucyrus, $6,589; Ashland county, $19,358; Crawford county, $12,772; Morrow county, $20,251, and Knox county, $16,228.

BLASTS DAVEY IN ANNOUNCING HIS CANDIDACY

'Where Did I Hit You, Martin?' He Asks In Letter Replying to Governor's Attack.

HOT BATTLE FORESEEN

Cincinnatian Announces He'll Run In Sharp Answer to Davey Castigation.

CINCINNATI — Climaxing an exchange of political punches with Gov. Martin L. Davey, former Lieut. Gov. Charles Sawyer today announced his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for governor of Ohio.

In a 1200-word open letter to the governor in which he replied to Davey's rebuke following the Jackson day "harmony" dinner, Sawyer closed with these words:

"P. S. I almost forgot to tell you in confidence that I will be a candidate for governor in the coming Democratic primary."

Two-Way Fight Seen.

The entrance of the national committeeman in the race was expected to develop into a two-way fight for the nomination as Davey commented last week that "your tactics may force me to be a candidate for re-election."

"You fouled me before the Jackson day dinner and apparently I landed on your solar plexus," wrote Sawyer. "As you are gasping on the ropes, you yell that I hit you below the belt . . . just where did I hit you, Martin?"

Davey asserted the Cincinnati attorney's speech at the Democratic feast in Columbus Jan. 8 in which Sawyer commented "charges of corruption and graft are rampant," was an example of "bad manners."

'You're Strangely Sensitive.'

"What I said at that dinner I repeat now," Sawyer wrote, "that the Democratic party should be free of hatred and ill-will and dissension, and unless a change comes we are in for trouble.

"You seem to be strangely sensitive to the mention of graft and corruption . . . ," Sawyer added.

"You talk about 'bad manners.' Don't be silly! . . . How much 'bad manners' was shown in your effort to keep me and the two United States senators off the program, an effort which you did not drop until the last minute? . . ."

Sawyer advised the executive to "tell your subordinates and Frank Poulson (chairman of the state Democratic committee) to give a "complete disclosure of every-

PITTSBURGH—(AP)—Five hundred men remained idle today while a U. S. department of labor mediator pushed efforts to settle a two-day-old strike of produce handlers.

John A. Moffett, labor department mediator from Washington, announced he had met with strike leaders and would meet with dealers today, but John J. Lauer, counsel for the dealers, said "nothing definite could be agreed upon."

The Produce Workers union (A. F of L.) called the men from their work Sunday at noon and at first a famine of green vegetables and fruits was feared in the tri-state district supplied by the Pittsburgh yards.

National and other large store organizations, however, continued to supply their local retail outlets.

7 Perish, 25 Missing as Blaze Levels Canadian Boys' School

MONTREAL — (Canadian Press) —Seven persons were known dead after a fire swept the college of the Sacred Heart, a boarding school for boys, today at St Hyacinthe, Que., and the town's chief of police said "about 25, or maybe 30" still were missing hours after the building had collapsed.

Police Chief A. Bourgeois said six bodies had been taken from the ruins of the school, operated by the brothers of the Sacred Heart, and doctors reported another died later in a hospital.

About 22 others were taken to the hospital, most of them in night clothes, through sub-zero weather.

The ruins of the school, on the outskirts of St. Hyacinthe 35 miles east of Montreal, were being searched for more bodies.

About 160 students attended the institution

The fire chief said the blaze broke out about 2 a m. and that his men had fought the flames for more than three hours before searchers could get near to look for bodies

Some of the students were taken to nearby farm houses and police said on this account it was difficult to check quickly the number of dead.

Col. P. A. Puize, head of the Quebec provincial police, said police at St Hyacinthe had reported four members of the order of the Sacred Heart were among those known dead.

Confesses Slaying of Aged Widow and Young Friend

RELATIVE OF VICTIM TELLS LURID STORY

40-Year-Old Suspect Breaks Under Grilling, Admits Killing Two Women.

MINEOLA, N. Y.— (U.P.) —John Reo, slender, 40-year-old fugitive, confessed today, after more than 24 hours questioning, that he killed Mrs. Celinda Waite, 59-year-old widow, and her friend, Jean Schuellain, 18.

Reo, who was related to Mrs. Waite by marriage, told his story to District Attorney Edward J. Neary of Nassau county. Neary said he would be charged with first degree murder for the slayings, motive of which the district attorney said was obscure.

Both Shot to Death.

Mrs. Waite and Miss Schuellain were shot to death in the Waite home at Elmont, N. Y., last Wednesday. Reo was found in a squalid rooming house in New York City Sunday afternoon, and until 3:40 a. m. today he had insisted that he had no knowledge of the crime.

"I'm feeling fine," the gray-haired, former Lyndhurst, N. J., filling station operator told Neary after signing a confession.

As related by Neary, Reo told investigators the following story:

At 3 p. m on Jan. 12, he arrived at the Waite home, in which he had boarded for a week during the latter part of November. Mrs. Waite admitted him. Miss Schuellian, who had stopped at the home almost daily with home-baked goodies for the widow was sitting at the dining room table

Mrs. Waite denounced Reo for having departed the day after Thanksgiving without paying for his room. That angered him, and he took a .32 caliber revolver from his pocket and ordered both women upstairs.

No Joke.

"Are you joking?" Mrs Waite asked.

"No, I'm not," Reo replied. "Get upstairs."

The women complied. When they reached the second floor, Reo told Mrs. Waite to enter a bedroom to the right of the stairway. He ordered Miss Schuellain into the adjoining room, which he had occupied

He searched bureau drawers in both rooms, and grabbed what silk stockings he could find. Then he went to Mrs. Waite's room, forced her to lie down and bound her hands and feet. Returning to the adjoining room, he made Miss Schellain sit in a chair and bound her to it He then shot her through the temple.

He went back to Mrs. Waite's room, and shot her—also through the head. By bus and elevated train, he returned to his New Yerk rooming house. Later, he boarded a ferryboat for New Jersey. When it reached the middle of the Hudson river, he tossed the revolver overboard.

Reo was examined by Dr. William G Burke of Hicksville, N. Y., after he had signed the confession. It was a precautionary move to offset a possible claim that the statement had been obtained under "third degree" methods. Burke reported that he had found Reo "in fine shape."

'Goodbye Son,' Says Father As Two Go To Death In Chair

BOSTON—(AP)—Praying with a fervor more in keeping with a Sunday church service than with a brilliantly-lighted death chamber, Frank and Anthony Di Stasio, father and son, died in the electric chair at State prison early today for the "torch murder" of Daniel Crowley, Boston laborer.

Anthony, 24, shuffled into the chamber a few minutes after midnight.

He was praying when he died.

The father seemed to waver as he was led into the chamber, but he rallied quickly.

"Goodbye, son, it's tough. But I'll see you again," he said as he was about to be placed in the chair.

The two Di Stasios were charged with murdering Crowley and burning his body in an effort to collect $20,000 in life insurance carried on the father's life.

Crowley was a stranger to the two slayers.

No matter when or where the students of Mansfield high school hold their functions, the band is usually there, too. J. Nick Dent, the band's ace baton wielder, literally stole the show from contestants when he did his rod juggling without nary a slip on the ice . . . and he put on his twirling act with gloves, believe it or not.

Another old Mansfield calendar has come to light, this one the property of R. L. Bookman, 16 North Adams street. It's a calendar for the year 1864, which would make it 74 years old, issued by the Mansfield insurance agency in those days of Brinkerhoff and Nail, familiar names in Mansfieldiana. The picture on the calendar shows a fire that destroyed a large Cincinnati store, appropriate, surely for an insurance agency calendar.

What is believed to be the oldest coin machine in Mansfield is in the possession of Lee Remy, city detective. The ancient contraption has been in the cellar of the Middleton drug store, North Main street, for years. It was operated in the store when it was owned by Philip Laver, more than 45 years ago, according to Remy. It is a race track with mechanical horses under a glass dome. The horses go into a race when a nickel is inserted in the machine.

FOUR SENATORS OPEN DRIVE TO PASS MEASURE

Call Chances of Vote 'Good'; Talkathon Against Lynch Bill Continues.

WASHINGTON — (AP) — Four senators undertook today to revive the war referendum proposal which the house recently shelved after President Roosevelt denounced it

Senator Nye (R-ND) said he and three colleagues who have introduced slightly different constitutional amendments would agree on one measure and try to obtain a senate vote at this session.

"I think we have an excellent chance," he declared.

Provisions Differ.

Nye said the new proposal would differ from the house resolution by Rep. Ludlow (D-Ind) in that it would make a popular vote on declaring war unnecessary if a foreign nation invaded any part of the western hemisphere.

The Ludlow resolution would have required a referendum unless the United States was invaded.

Associated with Nye in the new campaign were Senators Capper (R-Kans), La Follette (Prog-Wis), and Clark (D-Mo).

In the senate itself, southerners kept up their "talkathon" against the anti-lynching bill. Senator Ellender (D-La) started his fourth day of speechmaking.

Senator McKellar (D-Tenn), another foe of the bill, proposed as a substitute a resolution praising the states for their efforts to reduce the number of lynchings. He read telegrams from governors of 14 southern states criticizing the pending measure, which would penalize counties in which lynchings occurred.

Claims Enough Votes.

Senator Van Nuys (D-Ind), a co-author of the measure, said there were more than enough votes to pass it.

The senate appropriations committee approved yesterday the bill providing 1939 funds for the government's independent agencies, and southerners were hopeful it might be taken up at once.

Senator Austin (R-Vt) asserted that the longer the filibuster continues, the better the chances are to prevent enactment of the governmen reorganization measure, next on the senate program.

The house meanwhile approached a final vote on the treasury-postoffice appropriation bill. It eliminated $2,500,000 yesterday for construction of annexes to the government printing office.

The Great Game of Politics

—By FRANK R. KENT

UNDOUBTEDLY, events of the past three weeks have widened the circle of those who believe that the most serious aspect of the national economic situation is the extraordinary lack of stability about the president. Faced with the realities of a depression, he not only has failed to chart a clear course for himself, but he amazingly vacillates between the divergent action urged by conflicting groups of advisers with neither of which he really sees eye-to-eye and certainly neither of which now has complete confidence in him.

At a time particularly calling for a clear-headed sense of direction, he adheres to his shifty first-term strategy and still pictures himself—to use his own simile—as the football quarterback whose next play is determined by the success of the last one. That may be all right on a football field, but it is not a satisfactory way to manage the affairs of a great nation in a crisis.

How anyone can expect business or labor, finance, journalism or congress to adjust themselves, support and co-operate with a government obviously without a fixed economic philosophy or any clarity of thought about one, is not easy to see. Ever since the present depression (which Mr. Roosevelt resents being called such) became too acute to ignore, he has promoted a series of happenings that, instead of restoring confidence and compelling co-operation, have enhanced confusion, baffled most impartial observers and dismayed the more intelligent of his intimate friends. That is the truth about the situation

EITHER personally, or through his inspired aids, he has alternately patted business on the back and kicked it in the pants. First he has frowned upon the suggestions of his anti-capitalistic counselors but later convinced them that his "heart is in the right place," that he does not intend to "let the people down" by making an concessions to business at all. And then, a day or so later, these so-called "liberals" are again perturbed by the emergence from the White House of outstanding exponents of big business who assert that a "constructive talk" was had, and that from now on relations between government and industry are bound to be better.

* * *

LAST WEEK, one hour before the appearance of a particularly important group representing finance, industry and labor, specially invited to confer with the president, a sensational statement came from him avowing his news holding company policy, which, if carried out, one Democratic senator—Adams of Colorado — said would mean "economic anarchy." And this was followed by the dramatic tearing piece at his press conference of a memoranda left with him by a utility leader, brought down to Washington hoping for a "better understanding."

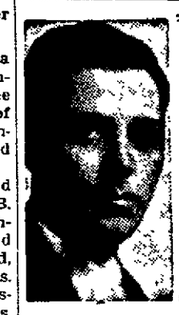
Incidentally, it is a fact that at least one of the public utility executives recently sent for, left the White House very puzzled indeed. Personally invited to come to see the president, he found himself cordially greeted, listened for 10 minutes to an interesting discourse on deep sea fishing, was told several good stories and then, when the president's secretary announced another appointment was courteously dismissed without having an opportunity to mention the question on which he believed he was to be consulted.

* * *

THAT SORT OF THING has happened before. Men have gone to see the president at his request, come away without having talked upon anything of real importance, found their visit recorded in the newspapers, been forced to conclude that for some occult White House purpose they had been used as window dressing. Undoubtedly, some of the business men conferences of the last three weeks have been window dressing and nothing else. And there will be more of them.

This week there is to be a large gathering of 50 odd, chaperoned by Secretary Roper, all ready to "cooperate," all anxious for a "better understanding." That this conference will be harmonious and the business men come out "encouraged" is fairly sure. But, it is equally sure that at his next press conference or with the "Richbery plan" or with a gesture toward further inflationary expenditures or in some other way, Mr. Roosevelt will reassure his left wing friends, who are deeply pained whenever he appears to be on the verge of recovering faith in the multiplication table.

The fact is that the president appreciates the business point of view, recognizes the truth of what his conservative advisers have told him, knows he cannot pull the New Deal, or the country out of the hole unless business recovers its confidence and courage. He knows all that, but he simply cannot bear alienating his radical friends, or having them say he has "surrendered to Wall Street," "betrayed his trust," "gone over to the Tories"—or use toward him any of the other stock phrases that fall so readily from his lips. It is unfortunate for the country that this is his state of mind because it prevents any real strength of administration at a time when it is very badly needed. This business of playing both ends against the middle may be all right when things are on an even keel, but it is not without danger when they are not.



Hollywood Speaks—

—By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—Tricky business: In the Jack Holt film, "All Were Enemies," there's a scene in which Beverly Roberts' face must be "drained slowly of its color." To make her face "go white," she firsts goes blue. In her sky-blue make-up, she is "lighted" with a series of color filters. These, changing slowly from deep magenta to pale vermillion, turn the trick for the camera. (It's a variant of the old trick by which black-face comics go white on the screen— mixing colored lights with colored make-up).

Heiress Geraldine Spreckles acquired the screen name of Anna Johns and her release from contract about the same time . . . Chili Bouchier from England arrived and departed before the name-changers could get to work . . . But Ellen Clancy (who is pretty and looks exactly like Ellen Clancy) now is called Janet Shaw . . . Nice business! . . .

* * *

Times have changed, or audiences . . . One of the first Fox talkies was "Are You There?" It starred a famous British comedienne, whose name was—and still is—a byword in the theater . . . About the only release her picture ever won was at previews . . . Whenever a theater hereabouts needed a preview attraction and couldn't get a real one it showed "Are You There?" . . . Audience reaction was always the same: bewilderment . . . But now Beatrice Lillie is one of the hits of the Bing Crosby picture, "Dr. Rhythm." . . . Audiences have caught up with the Lillie style, for she hasn't changed it' . . .

James Cagney's first picture since he made up with Warner Bros. will be "Boy Meets Girl"—and if Marie Wilson isn't in the girl role she'll be broken-hearted. The nice child gets jittery every time there's a rumor to the contrary . . .

* * *

Larry Crabbe's hair has undergone so many dyes for various roles that they're calling him the "chameleon" . . . Sentiment lurks where you least expect it: Big Victor McLaglen was among those who simply had to rush home for the holidays . . .

Bette Davis, to work her way through schools and preliminaries to a theater career, at various times waited on tables (Cushing Academy), coached plays, did kitchen duty (Crest Alben school) acted as secretary, was hostess in a tea-room, served as usherette at the Cape Cod Playhouse, where she hoped to act.

Writer Scorns Woman Who Gives Up

By VIRGINIA LEE

I'M AFRAID you will grow bored with my preaching about "counting your blessings," but I heard the following little story last night, and it made me realize more than ever that blessings and misfortunes are only relative.

A certain woman lives not far from me. She is a widow and has a very devoted son and daughter-in-law. Her husband left her well off, and she has a quite luxurious suite in a swanky apartment hotel. She also has a companion to read and amuse her, and a sister living at the same place who is devoted to her. Many of her friends lost their incomes during the depression, but not her. She has financial security.

This woman is 70 years old and lately her eyesight has been failing. Her physician has just informed her that nothing can be done to help her sight, and that while she will always be able to see large objects so that she can walk about without bumping into things, she will never be able to read, sew or do any other close work.

At this news the woman has taken to her bed. Never, she says, will she walk through the lobby of her hotel or go anywhere. She is going to stay in bed, and she doubtless makes continual moan about her misfortune.

Nearby is a lone woman—an art teacher in the public school, who has had to give up her work because of a similar misfortune. She has a somewhat shabby room in a large house, and a very small income. Her eyesight, too, has failed, and although the doctor says he will operate on her eyes in a few months, there is no certainty that the operation will do much good.

This woman tries to go about cheerfully and make the time go by. The week days seem long, she says, because her friends are nearly all business or professional women whose week days are occupied. On Sunday, however, she goes to church, has dinner with some friends and has a gala time. She has never married and has no devoted family hovering about her, and yet her attitude is so much more gallant than this other woman's

I often have thought that it is a salutary thing for everyone to have a few misfortunes. If every person who has been brought up in luxury and never known what it was to lack money for anything he or she desired, could be utterly without means of support for even a short time, they would not be so glib with their remarks about the destitute—no more "let them eat cake' phrases.

If all of us who take our eyesight, hearing and active limbs for granted, could only experience the horror of blindness, deafness or loss of some other function of the body, we would be so much more appreciative of our faculties, and so much more sympathetic and helpful to those who are handicapped.

Marriage Meddlers

By ADELE GARRISON

Continuation of "Married Comrades"

I WAS angry enough at Dicky to ignore his challenge and go frostily out of the room, but in true feminine fashion, curiosity conquered rage, and I found myself saying pertly:

"I never did have a mathematical mind. If you know why Philip Veritzen would plan to furnish a car and chauffeur for Mary and me, please tell me—in simple language, I dont feel as if my alleged brain could stand much more of the vagaries of Veritzen pere."

"Spoken like a good woman and true, he answered with a grin, his good nature suddenly restored. "And I'll try to elucidate in words of one syllable, or thereabouts."

Dicky Explains.

In the first place," he said, "such a gesture would only be in keeping with the sumptuous surroundings which the old fox provides for his feminine stars when rehearsing. The Veritzen regime must always be royal.

"In the second place," he checked another finger, "he wishes to make a special gesture in Mary's case. I'll wager you'll find that nobody will be so flattering and attentive to Mary as her father-in-law. He wants to provide an out for himself when, according to what he will permit to seep from underground channels, he is compelled, oh! so reluctantly, to replace her in the role for which she is rehearsing. Everybody will recall his devotion to her and applaud him for his spartan decision when his artistic conscience triumphs over his paternal affection for his son's young wife."

"I could strangle him," I choked, my fingers clenching into fists.

"I'll save you the trouble," my husband said, "I never did strike an older man, and, of course, I can't beat him up, but as sure as God made little apples, I am going to put him over my knee and paddle him lightly to his everlasting humiliation, if he tries any tricks on Mary."

Spy Is Suspected.

All his strong affection of his orphaned young niece was in his voice, and I mentally applauded him.

"Thirdly — and lastly," he checked, "the chauffeur in reality will be a spy, reporting every one of Mary's movements when she goes abroad."

"And ready to invent some fictitious ones to suit Phil Veritzen's book," I said caustically.

"Right you are," Dicky said. "Of course, there's about a hundred to ninety chance that we're all wet about this, and that old Phil hasn't any ulterior designs against his daughter-in-law. But what puzzles me is why he has permitted you to chaperone Mary. He must know that he can't put over anything on you."

"His egotism is so colossal," I returned, "that he probably thinks he can catch me napping. And if he could maneuver things so that I would be temporarily away from Mary for a portion of the time that I am supposed to be chaperoning her—don't you see?

Would Hire Nurse.

"I see—only too clearly," Dicky said. "I also see something else: that you mustn't leave her alone for a single instant unless some responsible woman is there to take your place. And that brings me squarely up against something else. Suppose I needed you, as I well may, you couldn't leave unless — let me think a minute!"

He tapped his fingers against his forehead impatiently, while I wondered anew at these repeated hints of some mysterious need of my help which he expected. Then he spoke crisply, and I gave him my intent attention.

"That apartment is at the Hotel Lansfield, isn't it?" he asked.

"Yes."

"Then, we ought to be able to get a room on the same floor, or near it, for another woman. I have it! That Miss Whitlock, the nurse who helped us out in the stunt we staged of pretending Allen Drake was your father. She's the soul of discretion, as well as being an able citizen. Will you get her on the telephone and see if she's on a case? If she is, it will be just too bad for her patient. I'll pull all the wires I know to have somebody assigned to her case, so she can come to the hotel for the duration of the rehearsals."

"The Authority on Authorities"

NO TRUMP PREFERRED

MINOR SUIT contracts should, as a rule, be shunned like poison when there is any other playable spot in the hand. It is even better, ordinarily, to make a try for a no trump game with only one stopper in the hostile suit. A contract in which you can afford to lose only two tricks on your way to game is almost as hard as a small slam in which you can afford to lose only one trick.

	♠ 9 8 3 ♥ Q J 10 7 5 2 ♦ 8 5 ♣ 10 7

(Dealer: West, East-West vulnerable.)

This deal arose in a duplicate tournament and the bidding varied at several tables. All West players started with 1-Club, but from there on the bidding proceeded along different lines.

At one table, after the club bid, North doubled, East redoubled, South called 1-Heart, West passed, North bid 1-Spade, East 2-Clubs, South 2-Hearts and West jumped to 5-Clubs, which North doubled.

At this contract the opponents were able to defeat East-West by capturing one heart and two diamonds.

At another table the bidding was 1-Club by West, 1-Spade by North, 1-No Trump by East, a pass by South, 2-Clubs by West and 3-No Trumps by East. With an opening bid made by his partner, East figured his partner for diamond stoppers. East's fine club fit also indicated to him that a no trump game was a safe spot.

The spade 9 was led against this contract and the declarer was able to make 4-No Trumps.

HOROSCOPE

For Wednesday, January 19.

WHILE THE day may be an adventurous and exciting one, with many surprises and new opportunities, according to the predominant aspects, yet there are signs of rather conflicting situations.

Those whose birthday it is are assured a year of surprises, adventure, romance and quite unexpected change, affecting both business and private lives profoundly. While there may be benefits and much satisfaction from such a sudden turn of events, there are also omens of danger, probably because of rash, foolish or indiscreet personal behavior. Be particularly circumspect in affectional relations.

A child born on this day may be talented in unusual occupations, original, independent in thought and action, but personally attractive and popular. It may have an adventurous or romantic career.

My Neighbor Says:

Have you tried the new shortening now on sale in the grocery stores? It may be mixed with flour and salt and set away on your pantry shelf until you wish to use it. You then only have to add water to it to make a delicious flaky pie crust.

To remove wallpaper from plastered walls first wet paper thoroughly with a sponge dipped in soapsuds, then loosen with a putty knife.

Never throw away the bones in fresh or canned salmon. Boil them until soft, pound into a fine powder and put into the white sauce served with salmon. They add a nutritious element.

When restringing beads use two strands of dental floss instead of one. Beads are not likely to cut through two strands.

Tygers Face Sandusky Jinx On Streaks' Court Tonight

Speaker Puts Os' On 'Spot'

Spoke's Prediction of 35 Wins For Feller Starts Vitt Off on Wrong Foot.

By OSCAR RUHL
News-Journal Sports Editor.

KNOWING Tris Speaker as a man qualified to speak on matters pertaining to baseball, it is difficult to believe that the former garden patrolman made the assertion that "Bob Feller should win 35 games next summer.

If Speaker actually made the statement, it is doubtful whether he was serious.

Clevelanders, easily convinced by anything Speaker has to say are taking the prediction seriously, and you can surmise their disappointment if Feller fails to reach the staggering total of triumphs the former tribal chieftain thinks he's capable of winning.

* * *

NO PITCHER HAS won as many as 35 games since 1913 when Walter Johnson, then in his prime, accomplished the feat, but we doubt whether there will be any pitchers to equal the ex-Washington hurler's mark this year.

Speaker

Feller, apparently, is destined to become one of the real pitching greats of the game, but the Iowa boy does not appear qualified to achieve the mark as early in the career as this year.

* * *

ONLY four moundsmen have won 35 or more games in the last 33 years, and all were veterans of many years of experience when they turned the trick, not youngsters like Feller. They were Jack Chesbro, Ed Walsh, Joe McGinnity and Johnson.

Chesbro won 41 games for the old New York Highlanders in 1905. McGinnity won 35 for the Giants in 1904. Walsh's year was 1909 when he compiled 40 victories for the White Sox, and, of course, Johnson burst on his 36 triumphs against seven losses in 1913.

* * *

SPEAKER'S statement resembles Oscar Vitt of a typical managerial start in Cleveland. The same as his predecessors, Vitt will make his major league debut with two strikes on him.

If Feller fails to win the number predicted by Speaker, or fails to come anywhere near the figure Vitt will be blasted by those who are swayed by the word of the ex-Cleveland pilot.

Vitt may be able to counter the Cleveland managerial "box" but not if he has to contend with buck such will collections as offered by Speaker.

The New York Yankees job is going to be difficult enough without trying to make the preseason predictions come true.

* * *

CLEVELAND fans should appreciate the fact that Vitt will at least attempt to manage the Indians without interference.

His predecessors have been accused of loitering in the "front office." These accusations may not be true, but there is little fear that Vitt will ever be under such conditions in this city.

Vitt is highly anticipating enjoys to test his managerial ability with a "green" ball club and we believe he is the man he said he will be for the Mack for everything that transpires on the ball field that does not meet the approval of the general manager.

* * *

VITT has already stated he will not be dominated by any player. He conferred with Bill Terry, manager of the Giants regarding the problem of the prohibition schedule, and the New York pilot says he will not be worried by two days of rain with crowds."

"See, I'm with you. Two days of rain against the Yankees is as good as a victory. We will be satisfied," Terry replied.

That stopped Terry and convinced him that he would be content to keep the Yankees out of the money during the spring training games with the Giants and Dodgers.

Feller may be a success in two days, or may fail completely. Vitt "He's not going to be a pitcher that falls on his face" and is going to be picked for the All-Star team.

If Vitt sticks to his guns he may do alright in Cleveland and can bet on it.

A jealous husband, a golf-crazy wife and a playboy start a three-cornered fight in "Change of Heart," opening at the Madison theater, Wednesday. Gloria Stuart, Michael Whalen and Lyle Talbot head the cast of romantic comedy. The plot of the picture revolves around the activities of a serious business man and his wife, whose only hobby is playing golf. Matrimonial bliss breaks down when the golf-crazy wife finds that her hubby interferes with her hobby. She gives up her husband. And then the playboy rides into the picture, playing golf and escorting her around at night. Things reach a climax when the two men enter a golf tournament. Alice Faye, in "You're a Sweetheart," plays through today.

Romance of Pioneer Days.

Two generations of an American family, laid against one of the most colorful periods in American history, are traced in "Wells Fargo," starring Joel McCrea, Bob Burns and Frances Dee. The background of the romance is supplied by the story of the Wells Fargo express business, predecessors of the Railway Express agency. The family is that of McCrea, man of vision, who goes to the west for the purpose of growing with it and of establishing a "lifeline of an empire" between the east and the sprawling settlements on the Pacific coast. His wife is played by Miss Dee, who incidentally is his wife in real life. The film traces their fortune from the time of their marriage through the Civil war.

* * *

"Blossoms On Broadway".

Edward Arnold, Shirley Ross and John Trent are featured in the musicale, "Blossoms On Broadway," at the Majestic theater. The story depicts the adventures of a phoney promoter who wants to get rich quick. Arnold plays the promoter, who arranges to "sell" a miserly millionaire on the idea that he can clear himself on his hoarded gold by melting it down and pretending that it has just been mined. The second picture is "West of Shanghai," with Boris Karloff. Karloff portrays a powerful Chinese war lord who matches wits with Americans trying to buy oil consessions in his country.

* * *

"Thunder Trail".

The story of two brothers, separated for almost two decades, and brought back together under strange circumstances, forms the plot of "Thunder Trail," the screen adaptation of Zane Grey's novel, at the Ritz theater. The two are separated in youth when a bandit kills their father on a western trail. They leave one of the boys for dead, and carry off the other, to whom the bandit takes a liking. Years later the two meet and set out to get the bandit who runs the town in which they live. Gilbert Roland, J. Carrol Naish, Charles Bickford and Marsha Hunt head the cast. Robert Taylor and Irene Dunne in "Magnificent Obsession," completes the double feature program.

ROUT THAT COLD

Let It Not Hang on Thru the Use of Half-way Measures!

Beware of the "common cold"! The "common cold," doctors will tell you, is the cause of more serious trouble than anything else.

Many a person who is in a pneumonia jacket today had but a "common cold" yesterday!

Take No Chances!

Neglect no cold. Take no chances with your treatment.

Treat a cold with a cold medicine, not a "cure-all." Treat it also with internal medicine. A cold is an internal infection.

Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine (LBQ tablets) are what you want for a cold. They are, first of all, a cold tablet, made expressly for colds. Secondly, they are internal medication, fourfold in effect.

Fourfold Effect!

First, they open the bowels.

Second, they check the infection in the system.

Third, they relieve the headache and fever.

Fourth, they tone the system and help fortify against further attack.

When you feel a cold coming on, trust to no makeshift methods. Adopt the proven course of safety—take Bromo Quinine.

Taken promptly, these tablets will often break up a cold in 24 hours and that's the speed you want.

Act Promptly!

Bromo Quinine tablets may be taken with confidence. They have been in use for over 40 years and are the world's largest-selling cold tablets.

Bromo Quinine tablets come in 35c and 60c sizes. The 60c size is the better "buy." It gives you almost 20 per cent more for your money.

Ask your druggist firmly for Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine (LBQ tablets) and accept no substitute.

A few pennies' cost may save you a world of trouble.

The club decided to act as host group for the joint meeting of the Hi-Y and Girl Reserves to be held on Feb. 14. The comittee named to co-operate with the G. R. for arrangements is comprised of Casto Ramsey, Lawrence Maidens, Bill Grubaugh and John Elliker.

A Farmer's Diary

January 17.

THIS evening I took a walk into an unfrequented pasture. The winding stream flows hard by a steep bank which is covered by green brier, small trees, shrubs, and most interesting of all a great number of ferns. They clothe the bluffs with a greenness that is pleasing to look upon. I searched diligently, hoping to find the rare, galloping fern.

As I climbed farther up the slope, in a small depression, under shelter of a slanting tree, I scraped the leaves away. Here I saw some very green grass. I placed my hands upon it lightly. How cool and refreshing! I smelled it. It held a delicious fragrance.

I looked a little farther to the south. There I viewed another sight. Leaves of the dandelion, seared at the tip, to be sure, but otherwise a true, dandelion leaf color. And still the wonder grew! For in the center, turned under by a few leaves, was a leathery, pale green, battered stem. I put my fingers underneath it and slowly rising was the yellow head of a dandelion. My first impulse was to pull it off and take it home. But my heart failed me. I placed the leaves back over it tenderly and returned home, but not empty handed.

SAWYER ENTERS GOVERNOR RACE

thing" to the senate committee investigating the administration.

"Most of the citizens of the state," Sawyer wrote, "feel that if the charges and innuendoes are baseless," this is the "quickest way to prove that fact."

'Never Backed Roosevelt.'

Sawyer's letter charged that the governor 'put the poison dagger in the back of Franklin D. Roosevelt."

"You never have been for Roosevelt," Sawyer wrote. "You weren't for him in '32. You were not even for him when he was nominated."

"Everyone knows what your comments and remarks have been with reference to the great Democratic Governor James M Cox,' he wrote. "During the 1934 campaign no word was too foul, no suggestion too base against the record and reputation of Democratic Governor George White. You have vilified and excoriated Senator Bulkley. You have stated that Senator Vic Donahey was so colossally ignorant that he didnt know where Europe was, although he is learned and experienced enough to have earned the approval of the people of Ohio in many elections.

"You supported Alfred E. Smith on the last ballot in the convention of 32 when, of course, he had no chance to be nominated, but you didn't support him in 1928 when you and he were candidates on the same ticket. You were not foolish enough to think that your vote meant anything in 1932, but what you thought was that that vote for Alfred E. Smith would appease the resentment of great groups of voters in the state of Ohio who knew that you were a traitor to him in 1928."

Sawyer said that the governor apparently had confused fighting with quarreling.

"Frankly, I don't care for fighting," he said. "I never seek a fight; but I never run away from one—I did not in 1917. Did you?"

He said he had supported Gov. Davey in the elections of 1934 and 1936.

"Contrary to the lie which you uttered in your letter, I have supported you both times when you ran, as I have the rest of the ticket and not until now either publicly or privately have I uttered any word in criticism of you," he wrote.

"Now you have asked for it."

Sawyer's announcement of his candidacy was expected. As, early as last summer, political machinery began moving in behalf of his candidacy.

Davey and Sawyer were opponents in the August, 1934, primary when Davey led Sawyer by about 20,000 votes and Sawyer led William G. Pickrel by about the same margin Sawyer was lieutenant governor then.

Sawyer will be 51 years old on Feb. 10. He has lived all his life in Cincinnati or its suburbs. He was elected to the city council at the age of 23, the youngest member ever to sit in that body. He saw service in the World war.

EX-CHAPLAIN BEFORE JURY

Rev. Sittler And Wife First To Be Questioned As Parole Investigation Opens.

who they were, and said the names would not be made public.

Son of Lutheran Head.

Rev. Sittler, who is the son of Dr. Joseph Sittler, head of the Lutheran synod of Ohio, is now pastor of the Indianola Lutheran church at Columbus.

He and Mrs. Sittler drove here this morning to testify before the jury.

Patrolman Harry Copper, plain clothesman on the police force, today was assigned by Police Chief Meade K Bates to be special investigator for the grand jury, to work under George Hurley, assistant attorney general, who is in charge of the Richland county investigation.

Calls for Others.

Shortly after the grand jury convened at 9:30 a. m. today, Hurley gave Superintendent Arthur L. Glattke a list of names of about 10 persons who either are or had been inmates at the reformatory, whom he said he wanted to question Glattke would not make public the list of names, but said that only two of those named were at present in the reformatory. The others, he said, have been paroled.

Hurley also said he would want to question Ben F. Owen, record clerk at the reformatory and William K. Mackey, former chaplain, who became general parole agent for the state on Jan. 3, but who still handled the duties of chaplain at the reformatory.

It was also indicated that Jenkins, who left the reformatory in 1935 to become superintendent of the London prison farm, might be called as a witness.

Indications today were that most of the former inmates to be summoned would be from Cuyahoga county. Tom and John Scalish, from Cuyahoga, were expected to be among those summoned. Tom entered the reformatory in August, 1932, to serve from 10 to 25 years on a robbery charge, was paroled Oct. 1, 1935. On December 17, 1937, he was declared a parole violator and is now being sought as such by the state, reformatory records show.

His brother, John, came to the reformatory on Dec. 26, 1933, also on a robbery charge, to serve from 10 to 25 years. Thirteen months later, in January, 1935, his sentence was commuted by former Governor George White, and he was released.

Parole Board In Session.

The grand jury, sworn in yesterday by Common Pleas Judge C. H. Huston, with James Bailey, finance company executive as foreman, was meeting in the parole board room, on the third floor of the office building. By coincidence, the parole board was in session at the reformatory today, and moved inside the walls to give the grand jury a place to meet.

Assisting Hurley in conducting the inquiry were Paul Hergenroeder, an assistant in the office of Attorney General Herbert S. Duffy, John Kilbane, former world's featherweight boxing champion, A. B. Frazier, special investigators.

After being sworn in, the jury, composed of 11 men and four women, held its first session in the courthouse yesterday afternoon, but heard no witnesses.

Hears Of Other Probe.

In session for about two hours yesterday afternoon in the petit jury conference room at the courthouse, the special jury heard a review of the findings of the Franklin county jury and received instructions as to the procedure to be followed here.

Hurley and Hoagenroeder were in charge of the session which was shifted to the courthouse in a last-minute move by Hurley who decided it would be needless to transport jurors to the reformatory for so short a period.

The short-notice change yesterday started the confusion and this morning a number of the jurors reported at the courthouse and then were told to go directly to the reformatory.

The customary fee of three cents per mile each way for traveling expenses will be in effect during the special session, Fred R. Zellner, county clerk of courts, said. Jurors will receive the usual $3 per day for the time they are in session, he added.

It has been proved by everyday use in more homes than any other medication of its kind—further proved by the largest clinical tests ever made on colds. (Full details in every VapoRub package.) Only Vicks give you proof like this.

Vicks VapoRub is direct external treatment. There's no dosing—no risk of spoiling appetite, or disturbing a delicate digestion. VapoRub can be used freely, as often as needed, even on the youngest child.

You simply massage VapoRub on throat, chest, and back (as illustrated). Then—to make its long-continued double action last even longer—spread a thick layer on the chest and cover with a warmed cloth.

No Long Waiting for Relief to begin...

Almost before you finish rubbing, the youngster begins to feel warm and comfortable as VapoRub goes to work direct through the skin like a poultice. At the same time its medicated vapors, released by the warmth of the body, are carried direct to the irritated air-passages with every breath.

This double action loosens phlegm—relieves irritation and coughing—helps break up local congestion. And long after the little one relaxes into restful sleep, VapoRub keeps right on working—hour after hour. Often, by morning the worst of the cold is over.

"SING, YOU SON-OF-A-GUN"

-and Dick Powell did-47 times

1. "THE TITLE OF THE SONG is 'Sing, You Son-of-a-Gun'," says Dick Powell, "and that's certainly what I did in filming my new Warner Bros. picture 'Hollywood Hotel'. I sang it at home, sang it in my dressing room, sang it on the set—47 times in all, I figured. I had many other...

2. "HARD SCENES. I sang 4 songs—on top of all the dramatic scenes. During this hard work I smoked pack after pack of Luckies, but not once did they bother my throat. This is also true . . .

3. "REHEARSING FOR 'Your Hollywood Parade', my new program. Luckies are the gentlest cigarette on my throat." (The "Toasting" process takes out certain irritants found in all tobacco.)

4. "THAT AUCTIONEER on our program reminds me that, among tobacco experts, Luckies have a 2 to 1 lead over all other brands. I think Luckies have a 2 to 1 lead also among actors in Hollywood."

5. THE CHANT of the tobacco auctioneer is the weirdest sound in business. In "slow motion" it would sound like this: "39 dollars bid . . . 39 . . . 9 . . . 9 . . . and a 40 . . . 40 bid . . . etc." . . . Concluding . . .

6. "SOLD AMERICAN", as the choice center-leaf tobacco is marked for Lucky Strike. Men who earn their living from tobacco, know that Lucky Strike buys the finest grades. These men are the . . .

7. INDEPENDENT Buyers, Auctioneers and Warehousemen. Sworn records show that, among these experts, Lucky Strike has twice as many exclusive smokers as have all other cigarettes put together.

TUESDAY, JANUARY 18, 1938.

One newspaper defines a deficit as "what you've got when you haven't as much as you had when you had nothing."

Down in Columbus a breath test is used to determine intoxication—but the candid camera appears to serve equally well.

Word comes that a game of chess, started in England 22 years ago, has just been finished—which offers a suggestion to anyone burdened with too much leisure.

Why Is a 'Holding Company'?

SINCE President Roosevelt's most recent pronouncement against holding companies, with emphatic call for their abolition in all lines of industry and finance, there has been much speculation as to the extent the President would actually wish to go in eliminating the interlocking of stocks and securities of various industrial, business and financial institutions.

While the President's earlier criticism had been directed more definitely toward apparent abuses of the holding company subterfuge for speculative manipulation, his later utterance appears to apply to the entire field of such operations and to question the real need for any holding companies, either associated with or pyramided above the actual operating companies.

A holding company, as defined by Webster's International dictionary, is (a) "a company the principal business of which is to own the stocks or securities of other companies, the interest or dividends upon which constitute the income of the holding company" and (b) "an operating company which acquires all or part of the stock of subsidiaries, usually to increase operating efficiency."

Had it not been for revelation of the flagrant abuses of so-called "holding companies", which resulted from the inordinate greed of such men as Samuel Insull, and others associated with mulcting the public out of millions of dollars, it may be doubted if the present stigma would rest on holding companies in general.

It may be, as is being contended in some quarters, that in the complexities of industrial and business financing and operation, there is a legitimate field for such holding companies as come under the "b" definition from the dictionary.

There can be no justification, however, for such holding companies as serve only to drain operating companies, boost prices to consumers and make millionaires of unscrupulous manipulators, without performing any necessary service to their subsidiaries.

When Today's Babies Have Grown Up.

CLOSELY associated with the trend of thought being developed among Mansfield young people, through activities of the Community Youth Forum, is a consideration of probabilities for a child born now.

Using figures applicable to the Detroit metropolitan district, Amos R. Shields, Boy Scout executive for that area, makes an ominous prediction of the fate of the 2,350 boys it is estimated will be born in that district during the present year.

"If organized society continues to operate as inefficiently as now," says Mr. Shields, "300 of these boys will sometime be killed or injured by automobiles; 800 will require mental hospital treatment; 400 will be murdered or will commit suicide, and 850 will be involved in police or criminal court experience."

"It has been found," adds Mr. Shields, "that very few delinquent boys ever have belonged to supervised groups . . . Youth responds to finer appeals and is influenced by wholesome leadership and constructive programs."

Steering away entirely from any extreme of idealism, it does appear that, in a quite practical way, some further steps can be taken in every community to broaden the scope of "wholesome leadership and constructive programs," coupled with gradual reduction of contaminating influences that have been largely responsible for past and present conditions, on which the above prediction is based.

How One Emergency Was Met.

A GROUP of Finnish students was engaged to sing at a concert in Boston. A prominent piece on their program was to be Sibelius' "Ukko the Fire Maker." Then, in some unaccountable way, the score of the music disappeared and could not be replaced in this country.

Americans arranged to have a facsimile of the entire score sent from Germany by wireless, at considerable cost, so that the program could proceed as announced.

This action, taken rather for granted by Americans, aroused much interest abroad, particularly in Finland. The Finns were very much pleased to have their singers and their music taken so seriously. They were also greatly awed at the extravagance of having an entire score radioed. Newspapers all over that country commented on America's "limitless possibilities and resources."

Incidentally, this is thought to be the first wireless transmission of a musical score. It suggests many interesting prospects.

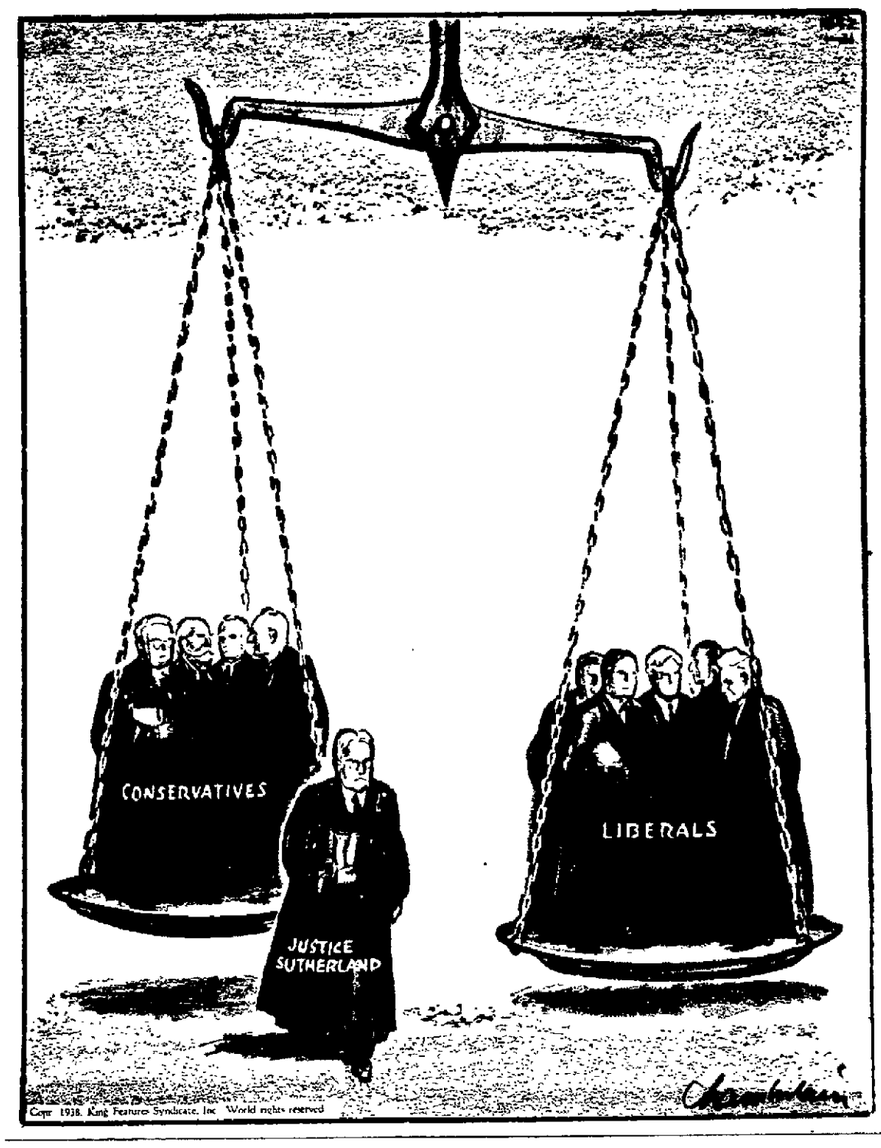
Find Oil In Siberia.

SOVIET RUSSIA, which once tried to do without money, ended by mining and using gold in large quantities. Lately the government has transferred its mineral interest to "liquid gold," still more important for a modern industrial nation. And great luck is reported—a discovery of "colossal national economic importance."—in the form of Siberian petroleum deposits stretching 1,500 miles from Lake Baikal eastward to the Pacific.

If this is true, Russia will proceed to exploit the oil, developing that frontier country and providing fuel for transportation and defense against Japan. As a first step, the Moscow government prepares to build a new military defense line north of Manchuria.

Just as naturally, Japan will have a new incentive to attack the Russians in Siberia and try to grab that oil field. Thus the new Russo-Japanese war, expected for years, may be brought nearer.

SHIFTING THE BALANCE



Detriment Seen In Excessive Protective Tariff

—By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON — Col. Frank Knox, who ran vice presidentially on the Republican Landon ticket in 1936, is out with an anti-monopolistic suggestion which many congressional Democrats are saying that their own party ought to grab at and make the most of.

The colonel's thesis is that excessive tariff protection, more than any other one thing, has been responsible for American monopoly evils.

Of course.

Except for our protective system American industry would have had the competition of imported products to reckon with; therefore it could not have skyhooted domestic prices unduly.

* * *

HIGH PRICES

Industry's argument has been that its high prices have enabled it to pay high wages.

To be sure, counted in dollars and cents, American wages HAVE been high, compared with old world wages. However, they have not been as high, relatively, as the prices American wage earners have had to pay for their livings. In a country, like ours, where $1 will not go as far as 50 cents in some other country, the laugh is on the $1 recipient; not on the 50-cent recipient.

Nevertheless, American labor persistently has been "sold" on the protective philosophy.

* * *

AS STEWART SEES IT

American industrial labor undoubtedly would have been squeezed by protected employerdom much more severely than it HAS been squeezed except for its partially effective unionization. It has had to fight like sixty for its rights, but it has maintained a modicum of them.

American white collar toilers have been worse off, because unorganized. They have been stung by high living costs, with proportionately lower incomes.

* * *

WHO BENEFITS?

Here are two-thirds of us, mulcted by tariff protection.

Urban labor mulcted somewhat; white collarites mulcted considerably.

Now the other one-third?—agriculture.

The average farmer cannot possibly be benefited by tariff protection, because mainly he is an exporter.

The American cotton planter?—for example. He raises so much cotton that he cannot possibly sell more than about 40 per cent of his crop in the U. S. A. He needs foreign markets for the remaining 60 per cent. An import tax makes everything that he has to BUY cost him more. It cannot immediately increase prices he seeks as an exporter.

* * *

"ROBBING PETER TO——?"

America's congressional representation has recognized all this for a long time.

Its agricultural spokesmanship has been for free trade and a bit of its other spokesmanship has been equally intelligent. But our protection complex has been so overpowering that common sense has not signified.

Import levies cannot help but hurt farm agriculture. That is obvious.

Accordingly, the scheme has been, while protecting industry, to subsidize agriculture.

That is to say.

To subsidize industry to agriculture's disadvantage, while subsidizing agriculture to industry's disadvantage.

It has not worked satisfactorily, naturally.

* * *

LOG-ROLLING

Tariff log-rolling has raised Cain also.

In Hoover-ian days, when the Smoot-Hawley tariff law was being concocted, there were two heavy levies proposed which puzzled me.

One called for a heavy import impost on manganese, essential to steel production. The other called for an equally heavy impost on a certain sort of clay, required for the production of fine china. The U. S. produces, in and around Montana, about 20 per cent as much manganese as America requires—not nearly enough to go around. The right kind of clay had come from France exclusively.

One would think, I submit, that manganese and that particular kind of clay should have been welcome in this country.

Yet Senator Burton K. Wheeler of Montana voted a thumping impost on manganese; Senator Ellison D. Smith of South Carolina for a similar impost on that particular brand of clay-china.

"Well," said Senator Wheeler, "Montana produces manganese."

"We have," said Senator Smith, "a mountain of that kind of clay in South Carolina."

* * *

QUEER!

The whole argument seems to be that our protective tariffs are responsible for our depressions.

The queer thing is that, while Democrats always have said so—a Republican, Colonel Knox, proclaims it.

Listen, World!

—By ELSIE ROBINSON—

There Are No "Right Jobs.

WANT to show how smart you are—or aren't? Then here's your chance—just tackle my fan mail! Particularly those five hundred daily outbursts from Young America. Five hundred letters from charming, intelligent, high-pressure youngsters who do the nation proud.

You'd like these young people . . . you'd succumb to their charm. But I'd give a lot to hear what you'd think of their problem.

For they have a problem — no fooling. THEY NEED JOBS. The majority of them were graduated from our various High Schools and Colleges this year and last. Now, with increasing bitterness and bewilderment, they watch the days pass—in idleness.

But why? Don't they want to work? They most certainly do. Plainly they possess all the traditional American ambition and aggressiveness, heightened by the stream-line vision and speed of a 16-cylinder age. From tumbled tops to twitching toes, they're rarin' to go!

BUT WHERE? AND HOW? THAT'S THE QUESTION.

Do I hear a herd of hoots? Thousands of Oldsters demanding, "But what of it? We, too, were rarin' to go. Every generation is—these are no different. But we took the first thing that came along and were glad to get it."

Yes, indeed—a healthy philosophy and one which proved plenty profitable to America until recently. But you are forgetting that these bewildered young people have, for the first time in our history, departed from that philosophy . . . have been taught that it was the poorest possible approach to adult work life.

You and I, entering maturity at the century's turn, were trained as future citizens, not as individuals . . . taught to take "pot luck" with the rest of the herd. But from the time these youngsters could snap their gum, they've been treated as Special Cases . . . tested, weighed, analyzed and schedulized to determine their particular and personal equipment . . . encouraged, by every device, to feel that they must enter Just The Right Niche—or else.

As a consequence, when they graduate, they exhibit a choosy attitude which is maddening to their bewildered and exasperated elders . . . who forget that they have paid millions to develop that very notion.

Before going further, let's get this straight. I am NOT whamming Modern Education. To the contrary, I enthusiastically endorse most of its methods and aims. But I also believe that in certain fundamental matters—such as the attitude of the Young Worldbeater toward his job—we could use a little common sense. It's all very well to plumb a youngster's depths and develop his assets, provided he has any. But it is much more important to prepare him to be a Regular Egg in case he doesn't happen to turn out an Einstein. And there is where our old American attitude toward work is mighty helpful.

America once knew, without any fancy charts, that WORK IS WORK in any language and that, regardless of your personal brilliance, there is no job which will suit you, or your boss, all the time.

Yes, it is pleasant to do the thing for which you feel best fitted. But it is far more imperative to be Generally Handy and Good-Natured in any chore, under any circumstances. No worker is good in ANY position until he has learned to stand the gaff of ALL positions . . . to make those common contacts and adjustments and stand those common strains which are the basis of all successful labor and decent citizenship.

"Waiting for the right job?"

Then you'll wait forever, youngster. For there are no right jobs. There are only RIGHT MEN . . . fellows who have WHAT IT TAKES, regardless. If you can pass THAT test, you have the industrial chart by the tail. Otherwise, though you possess a dozen degrees, you're still JUST A KNICKNACK.

DAILY BIBLE THOUGHT

PERFECTING THE CHURCH: Christ also loved the church, and gave himself for it; that he might sanctify and cleanse it with the washing of water by the word, that he might present it to himself a glorious church, not having spot, or wrinkle, or any such thing; but that it should be holy and without blemish.—Ephesians 5:25-27.

McIntyre's New York Day by Day

THE major supply of the world's fiction and magazine articles is hatched over the luncheon table. Not many writers confer with editors in the sanctums any more. It was long ago discovered ideas are more prolific and expansive in the informality of food and talk.

Some of the finest plots have come out of easy going luncheon casualness. Thought up at the moment stuff. Also, experience has fostered the system of letting the writer have full rein in ideas. Nearly all write best about the things that interest them most.

Albert Payson Terhune was inspired to write his dog stories during a fireside chat with a Collie asleep at his feet. Sinclair Lewis was imitating some home town characters after a small and select dinner party when "Main Street" suddenly took form.

Judge Priest was born while Irvin Cobb was telling the late George Horace Lorimer about a lovable jurist in Paducah. And so it goes through a long list of fictional favorites. A trivial incident recalled out of the past and a short story or novel is launched.

Most of those oily embryo Valentinos who popped to the peek-windows to answer the basement buzz in the speak-easy era are back waiting on tables again. And filling the usual come-easy, go-easy role are flat broke. In those days they could get away with their culinary atrocities because most of their patrons were not interested in food but the surreptitious snifter. Only the speakeasy fellows who served excellent food—such as Perona, Billingsley and the "No 21" crowd—in the days of bad liquor have survived with any success during post-repeal.

The household is chittery over a leaping goldfish mystery. On three widely separated occasions a goldfish has been found lifeless on the floor beside the rather large bowl. We have no cat and there was a different set of servants on each occasion, which precludes any suggestion of personal pique. There is generally a distance of about three inches that must be spanned before a fish could go over the brim of the bowl. Boo!

Dutton's led the way from Fifth avenue to Park with first of an elaborate book-shop trek for the Gold Coast. Two similar establishments are looking for locations in the section. Outright book-buying is now confined largely to wealthier districts. In neighborhoods not so opulent the circulating libraries take care of popular novel demands and public libraries the calls for classics.

Back in the tall wheat our literary arrivals were confined to Pearson's Weekly, the Youth's Companion and the annual coming of the Old Farmer's Almanac. Most literary fledglings out yonder made the Youth's Companion the goal of their flights. I sent them a number of poems and short skits which always came back, graciously rejected. Later when I was about 16 a trifle was accepted by St. Nicholas, for which I was paid with a year's subscription. No reward for writing since has been more stimulating. Or perhaps so just.

But the biggest journalistic windfall came from the Sunday editor of a paper in St. Louis for whom I gathered material for a series of articles while a reporter in Dayton, O. The series concerned a number of strange murders by a doctor who used hyoscin. I had forwarded a number of pictures our paper had used and passed along some other data about the action of such poison. Most of my material was luridly re-written in the St. Louis office. Two months later came a check for $268, certainly an eye-popper for a $12-a-week reporter. I held it a week or so expecting to be notified of a clerical mistake. Then with some misgivings I cashed it and indulged a spending splurge that included my first Tuxedo, which I wore to see Olga Nethersole carried up the stairs by her lover in "Sappho." Also for a magnificent and dizzy week I moved out of a second-rate boarding house into the city's leading hotel. There were rumors around, which I made no effort to deny, that I had fallen heir to a snug fortune.

Keeping Step

—By LESLIE EICHEL—

Why the Budget Remains Unbalanced.

ARGUMENTS over balanced and unbalanced budgets are beginning again. Certain small countries are balancing their budgets. But the large industrial countries are not—except England (and England is resorting to huge expenditures that may bring about an eventual collapse).

The fact of the matter is—according to political economists—the question is far deeper: We can balance our budget by making vast socio-economic changes which will be resisted; or we can unbalance our budget in the hope of saving the present system by "priming the pump" again and again and "letting business alone".

But suppose we balance the budget without making the socio-economic changes? How long till the 11 million hungry would take things into their own hands?

And suppose the government primes the pump again and again? How long till run-away inflation and money would become valueless?

And if "business were let alone," would there not be such reckless competition (one of the great dangers of the modern capitalistic system) and likewise would there not be such a concentration of capital into such few hands that the wheels of industry would stop altogether finally?

The greatest business in the United States is farming. The government not only "lets that alone", but gives it great subsidies (as the tariff is a subsidy to industry), yet farm prices have made wide declines, and farm sales have dropped.

And the reason is not difficult to find: Domestic and world purchasing power, through a variety of human-imposed obstacles, is down to a low level. The aim must be to find the medium of raising mass purchasing power.

* * *

ECONOMIC ILLS

A newspaper publisher and editorial writer well known throughout the middle west, David Gibson, visited the writer of this column the other day. Gibson for 35 years has been a consistent advocate of the Single Tax. He has written many articles on it. Recently, a taxation trust in Detroit published a pamphlet of his on unemployment—and a remedy.

"We have improved in everything in the last century except political economy," Mr. Gibson said. "We are just as ignorant today of economic laws as we were 100 years ago.

"And why? Too many people are enjoying the fruits of the present evils. But that will lead to collapse.

"It reminds me of the age when cholera swept the world. Tens of thousands perished from cholera and other diseases. But superstition ruled. People rang church bells instead of cleaning the streets. Men who saw the means of stopping the epidemics were even put to death. Eventually, when millions of people had been sacrificed, mankind began to adopt sanitary laws. We forget that has been a development of only the last century.

"And today we refuse to see that it is economic pressure which governs the moral conduct of man. We fight with guns—as we formerly burned at the stake—instead of conquering crime and war through equitable economic measures."

* * *

INTERESTING COMMENT

One of the best (and sharpest) columns in America is written by Jack W. Raper. It appears in the Cleveland Press.

And nowhere else has the railroad financial situation been put into a more compact nutshell than in this nugget:

"Frank E. Taplin of Cleveland told a United States senate committee yesterday that a syndicate he headed sold 222,930 shares of Pittsburgh & West Virginia stock to Pennroad corporation at a profit of $12,909,030 and that he and his family sold 97,000 shares at a profit of $70 a share. At present the stock is selling around $17. Now we know what's the matter with the railroads. We know what's the matter with railroad officials. We know what's the matter with Pennroad. There's doesn't seem to be anything the matter with Taplin."

* * *

THEN THIS—

Whereupon one turns to this in the carefully written financial column of the New York Times:

"Although Senator Wheeler's investigation into the extra-railroad activities of railroads has not been relished precisely in Wall Street, it has established one fact in such a manner as to facilitate the work of market letter writers when they assume to discuss the relationship between the Pennsylvania railroad and the Pennroad corporation.

"Hitherto, for one of these entrepeneurs to imply in writing that the Pennsylvania railroad's management in some fashion, in some way, had exercised any kind of influence in the expenditure by the Pennroad corporation of $143,000,000 in the capture of railroads of strategical importance to the Pennsylvania railroad was to invite a protest by some minor Pennsylvania railroad official.

"As a result of Senator Wheeler's investigation it has been established, and placed on the record, that the Pennsylvania railroad's management incorporated and arranged the financing for the Pennroad corporation, that this management insured through a voting trust that the holding company thus formed would act in the interests of the Pennsylvania railroad, at least until 1939, and that all the important officials of the Pennroad corporation have been nominated by the Pennsylvania railroad's management."

Work outdoors—if possible—when you're doing over old furniture To remove old varnish or paint first apply a thick coat of turpentine. After half an hour wipe off this coat and cover the furniture with a coat of thick washing soda and applied with a brush—to save the hands When this coat dries remove it with a stiff brush and scrape off any left-over varnish with a dull knife. If a commercial varnish remover is used follow the instructions carefully.

NEW TAPPAN RANGES BLEND WITH MODERN STREAMLINED KITCHENS

Conforming to the modern preference for streamline design, the new Tappan gas range blends ideally with today's smart styling of kitchens. The new models are not only lovely to look at, but also, they excel in efficient and economical operation.

Feeling that the majority of the public demands economy in the operation of a range, engineers of the Tappan Stove company have bent every effort toward the development of fuel saving improvements In the designing of top burners, they have taken into consideration a fundamental scientific principle that when the boiling point of water is reached it changes to steam and additional heat does not necessarily speed cooking.

As a result, the new simmer-set top burners have been developed. These burners may be adjusted to a very low flame which is uniform. They make possible the new "waterless" method of cooking vegetables. They assure greater efficiency and economy, and maintain temperatures with a surprisingly small amount of fuel—saving as much as 35 per cent over old type burners.

Another sensational development on the new Tappan gas range is the low temperature oven burner. This burner makes it possible to bake slowly at 250 degrees—the oven temperature now recommended by foremost authorities on home economics.

All you do is merely set the temperature dial at 250 degrees and turn on the gas. There is no need for preheating, searing, basting or watching. You can leave your kitchen for hours at a time, knowing that the correct temperature will be maintained accurately as long as you wish.

Features of the new Tappan range are being demonstrated this week at the 1938 Gasco Food Institute at the Ohio theater.

CHAPTER IV.

Terry twisted the stem of his cocktail glass slowly between his lean fingers before putting his thoughts into words. "I neglected to ask if the Rushmore fixed you up with that little room."

"Oh, yes. Nicely. It's a more expensive one than I would have picked out. But Judge Pomphrette quite insisted on that hotel; he and the manager are friends. I wouldn't be much surprised if I got a special rate on that account. I won't feel badly if I do."

Terry's gray eyes narrowed a trifle.

"Come clean, Dad," he demanded good-naturedly. "You intended going there from the start. What was the idea—letting me in for that Y. W. stuff?"

"But I didn't . . . really," Caradad said slowly. "The judge did insist on the Rushmore. But I didn't know that he had reserved a room for me. From something Mrs Pomphrette told me, I wasn't at all sure I would care for it. I had planned to call—to see if there was any mail. . . ."

Her explanation was curtailed by the arrival of the waiter. Terry did not refer to the matter again But his next question was discomfiting enough. "How long do you expect to favor us with your presence?"

"I don't know," was her frank admission. She watched his face closely, as she added, "A week, maybe."

"I was wondering," he returned casually. "Now, that you've let your ranch go, I suppose you won't be asking your way to the Stock Yards first thing, like most of them do." He assumed a slightly bantering air. "Being a lady of leisure, you'll probably go cultural in a big way — the museums and the galleries. And the stores, of course."

"Oh, yes," Caradad assured him demurely. "I'm starting early tomorrow to look for bath towels."

Terry's brows lifted involuntarily. "You are provincial! Putting up at a good hotel, and you talk of buying towels!"

"But I couldn't steal Mr Evans' wonderful towels He must be a nice man. Anyway, he did send me some roses and I . . ." She broke off suddenly, remembering her certainty that the gift of flowers had been Terry's.

"Roses, eh? Then I take it back—about your being provincial. And after the towels, what? I'm interested."

"I'm afraid you wouldn't be. All I have on my list is a few . . . essentials I do want to see the big stores, but I don't intend to spend much time in them. There are too many other interesting things I want to see."

"I was sure of it." Terry sampled a bit of anchovy with a critical air "I'll admit I couldn't be of much help to you in a search for those 'essentials.' And I'd be just as big a loss as a cultural guide, I'm afraid But I hope you'll let me be of some use to you during the lighter moments of your visit."

'Of course. But you mustn't feel that you have to devote a great deal of time to me"

"Nonsense! I want you to enjoy yourself Besides, you and I have a lit of chinning to do, to make up for lost time You'll be seeing plenty of me. Don't worry"

"I'll be only too glad"

* * *

Caradad thought that she detected an elaborate carelessness in Terry's next words Perhaps she only imagined it.

'Too bad you don't happen to know any people here—women, I mean. I'm more or less tied up during the day, of course But it would be nice if you had some one to steer you around the shops and that sort of thing Women always know so much better what other women want to see around a city" He was floundering a little, under the sober regard of Caradad's brown eyes.

'That might be nice," she agreed simply. "But I'm quite sure there is no one here that I know. Except you"

"Well," Terry returned expansively, "we can remedy that easily enough There are plenty of nice people here—you'll like them and they'll like you I want you to meet some of my friends—want to let them see what kind of gals we produce down in the big wide-open spaces. How does that steak look to you? Seem to be tender?"

"I know it's marvelous"

There was a silence of several minutes as the pair devoted their attention to the more serious features of the dinner. Caradad was the first to break it, by beginning hesitatingly. "I . . . I always could say things to you, Terry, and you would understand. It's ever so nice of you to want me to meet your friends and I'd love it. . . ."

"Sure!" Terry looked up from his plate with a quick smile. "I'm figuring right now on throwing a little party for you, the first night I can corral the right bunch."

"That's what I mean, Terry. I'm not bashful . . . but you know what social life is at home. Or isn't," she substituted. "I've gone out very little these past few years—with people my age. I'm afraid I might not . . ."

He laid down his knife and fork and looked at her with an accusing air, as she hesitated uncertainly.

"You're not fooling me, Dad Much. It isn't the 'country mouse' complex that's worrying you You're thinking that you're going to be put up against some frivolous, hard-drinking scandal-mongers who will feel sorry for you—never dreaming that they bore you to tears. You needn't be afraid . . ."

"Terry!" There was no mistaking the remorse in the brown eyes. "I didn't mean that, at all! You know I didn't! I was only thinking about you and . . ."

'Well, don't look so concerned. There's no great rush. You can't do us justice in a week. You might as well make up your mind to that"

Terry finished with a laugh, an attempt to hide a resentment that surprised him. He had been uneasy at the thought of introducing Caradad to his friends when he first met her Here she was, now, trying to make the situation easy for him . . . and he didn't like it, for some reason. His friends were very much unlike Dad But, after all, they were his friends.

* * *

He changed the topic of conversation abruptly. To Oklahoma and the old life there. For almost two hours the man and girl lingered at the table, recalling incidents and former friends Most of the questions came from Terry, and Caradad fancied that his interest was tinged now with a certain wistfulness. He must have found the city oppressive to his spirits these past years, after his carefree youth on the range.

"Good lord!" Terry ejaculated, with a dismayed glance at his watch. "I didn't realize that it was so late. It's after nine-thirty!"

"Really, is it?"

"I didn't mean to go on at such a rate," he continued remorsefully. "I at least could have asked if you cared to see a show, or something. I'm afraid it's a little late for that, but . . ."

"I'm sure I don't want to go anywhere, unless it's back to the hotel," Caradad assured him. "I need one good night's sleep yet."

"Okay. We'll amble over that way for exercise."

The next morning, Caradad ventured out on her own and window-shopped in a leisurely fashion until noon. Then she made her way back to the hotel with the intention of writing a lengthy letter to Judge Pomphrette to tell him of her trip and that she had met Terry Cantine. She would explain that she had located him through a former address and that he had taken her to dinner. She smiled to herself when she considered how little there was to tell. Somehow, Terry had not revealed much about himself

To her surprise, she found a slip in her mail box requesting that she call a city telephone number. It must be Terry, she decided She put the call through from her room.

"Does some one wish to speak to Miss Vardell?" she asked, when a woman's voice greeted her.

"Oh, yes! Miss Vardell . . . this is Gerta Greenway"
